

Alex loves social media. He finds it easier to make friends there. At college he gets bullied because of how he looks and what he believes.

Tonight he has a friend request from someone new called HistoryX. Alex looks at their profile and confirms HistoryX as a friend.

Alex and HistoryX talk a lot online.

They love the same music and games.

HistoryX tells Alex he gets him.

Alex feels he can talk to HistoryX about things that really matter.

A few weeks later HistoryX asks Alex for a picture. Alex sends home one in his favourite clothes.

HistoryX tells Alex he looks really cool.

A month later...

HistoryX asks Alex what he thinks about the bombing in London last week. He is really interested in what Alex says.

HistoryX agrees with Alex and sends him a link so he can find out more.

Alex tells HistoryX he admires people who fight for what they believe in.

HistoryX tells him the world needs more people like Alex. People who aren't scared, and who can change things.

Alex says he wants to help fight back.

HistoryX tells Alex about a group he can join. People like him, who are brave and doing their duty.

HistoryX sends Alex a video of the group in action. It looks cool.

